the result of a unique research project exploring the relationship between children s vernacular play cultures and their media based play this collection challenges two popular misconceptions about children s play that it is depleted or even dying out and that it is threatened by contemporary media such as television and computer games a key element in the research was the digitization and analysis of iona and peter opie s sound recordings of children s playground and street games from the 1970s and 1980s this framed and enabled the research team s studies both of the opies documents of mid twentieth century play culture and through a two year ethnographic study of play and games in two primary school playgrounds contemporary children s play cultures in addition the research included the use of a prototype computer game to capture playground games and the making of a documentary film drawing on this extraordinary data set the volume poses three questions what do these hitherto unseen sources reveal about the games songs and rhymes the opies and others collected in the mid twentieth century what has happened to these vernacular forms how are the forms of vernacular play that are transmitted in playgrounds homes and streets transfigured in the new media age in addressing these questions the contributors reflect on the changing face of childhood in the twenty first century in relation to questions of gender and power and with attention to the children s own participation in producing the ethnographic record of their lives kabbalistic manuscripts and textual theory uncovers the unstated assumptions and expectations of scribes and scholars who fashioned editions from manuscripts of jewish mystical literature this study offers a theory of kabbalistic textuality in which the material book the printed page no less than handwritten manuscripts serves as the site for textual dialogue between jewish mystics of different periods and locations the refashioning of the text through the process of reading and commenting that takes place on the page in the margins and between the lines blurs the boundaries between the traditionally defined roles of author reader commentator and editor this study shows that kabbalists and academic editors reinvented the text in their own image as part of a fluid textual process that was nothing short of transformative this book is certainly monumental offering in its seven hundred pages a wealth of documentation and distilled argument that manages to be both comprehensive in its materials and transparent in its critical insights it is rare indeed that a work of such formidable scholarship can actually be a pleasure to read and convincing in its elucidation of what are often extremely complex documentary circumstances and editorial traditions from the foreword by david greetham in contemporary discourse on china africa relations there are on the one hand the sino pessimists who see china as a giant vacuum cleaner sucking up africa s resources in order to fuel its own rapid industrialization and destroying africa s development potential in the process on the other hand the sino optimists see china as the ultimate savior of africa capable of or willing to develop the continent between the two divergent schools of thought are those sitting on the fence for the time being the sino pragmatists who are less sanguine for sure about what africa would gain from china africa relations but are nevertheless willing to reserve judgment until the dust settles this book is innovative in two ways it introduces a regional approach to the study of china africa relations by focusing on eastern and southern africa and it puts forward a disciplinary framework disciplinary in both senses of that term for interrogating the burgeoning literature about china africa relations by conceptualizing the three schools of thought mentioned above
