traces conflicts in Mexico over regional authority and labor employer relations between the state and competing industrialist and labor groups in Guadalajara Mexico City Monterrey and Puebla from the 1920s to the 1950s provided by publisher

Today Mexico is viewed as a success story in the management of economic adjustment and structural reform. Inflation is under control, capital and foreign investment are returning and output growth has increased. Mexico's recovery, however, has been neither smooth nor rapid. In mid-1982 Mexico was in deep economic crisis, compounded by an unfavorable international environment. Mexico was saddled with a large foreign debt, world interest rates were high, commercial banks had stopped lending, and the price for oil was dropping. Conditions at home were no better, with rampant inflation, increasing capital flight, and chaos in financial and foreign exchange markets. To confront internal imbalances and accommodate adverse external conditions, Mexico adjusted its consumption and output, then sought new ways to foster growth. The crisis and adjustment imposed great hardship and demanded enormous discipline on the part of the government. This was accomplished without serious political or social disruption. In this book, Nora Lustig analyzes Mexico's economic evolution from the outset of the debt crisis in 1982 until the sweeping reforms began to bear fruit in the early 1990s. She explains the causes of the 1982 economic crisis and why it took Mexico so long to restore stability and growth. She also explores the question of the social costs of economic crisis and adjustment and why the process may have been easier for Mexico than other debt-ridden countries. A discussion of the emerging role of the state in Mexico and the country's new outward-oriented development strategy is followed by an analysis of its search for greater economic integration with the United States and Canada. Selected by Choice as an outstanding book of 1992.

The industrialization process in Mexico began before that of any other nation in Latin America except Argentina, with the most rapid expansion of new industrial firms occurring in the 1930s and 1940s, and import substitution in capital goods evident as early as the late 1930s. Though Mexico's trade relations have always been dependent on the united states successive mexican presidents in the postwar period attempted to control the penetration of foreign capital into mexican markets in industry the state and public policy in mexico dale story recognizing the significance of the mexican industrial sector analyzes the political and economic role of industrial entrepreneurs in postwar mexico he uses two original data sets industrial production data for 1929 1983 and a survey of the political attitudes of leaders of the two most important industrial organizations in mexico to address two major theoretical arguments relating to latin american development the meaning of late and dependent development and the nature of the authoritarian state story accepts the general relevance of these themes to mexico but asserts that the country is an important variant of both with regard to the authoritarian thesis the mexican authoritarian state has demonstrated some crucial distinctions especially between popular and elite sectors the incorporation of the popular sector groups has closely fit the characteristics of authoritarianism but the elite sectors have operated fairly independently of state controls and the government has employed incentives or inducements to try to win their cooperation in short industrialists have performed important functions not only in accumulating capital and organizing economic enterprises but also by bringing together the forces of social change industrial entrepreneurs have emerged as a major force influencing the politics of growth and the public policy arena has become a primary focus of attention for industrialists since the end of world war ii
